This week: Urban connection

Georgia Tech architecture professor, suburban revitalization expert, and NashvilleNext speaker Ellen Dunham-Jones told a New Orleans audience this week that “the post-war suburbs have not been aging well” - but there’s still hope for new life among the dying big boxes and commercial strips.

San Francisco’s built on top of a network of formerly vital creeks and high-water streams. A new creative project will show, among other placemaking presences, where some of them used to be.

It’s not specifically named here, but Mace Bluff out in Cheatham County would provide a good vantage point to consider how ancient and modern cities compare.
