- * A fail safe paper ballot is used in a situation where a voter has failed to notify an election commission of a change of residence. This procedure insures that the voter participates in the correct district and precinct.

A paper provisional ballot is necessary when during an election, commission records do not show a citizen seeking to vote as being registered. This potential voter casts a provisional ballot. Election officials subsequently make a determination as to whether the individual is eligible to vote and either count or reject the ballot.
