

Join the growing number of family-friendly employers on the Mayor's Honor Roll

Mayor Karl Dean encourages parents to accompany their child on the First Day of School. It's important that families get involved in a child's education from the very start, by touring the school, meeting teachers, and joining the parent organization. The Mayor's Honor Roll recognizes Nashville businesses that have a policy in place encouraging their employees to take their child to school on the First Day.

How Does My Company Qualify for the Mayor's Honor Roll?

Your company must have a policy or practice in place to encourage your employees to take their child to school on the First Day. Honor Roll companies make this commitment in a variety of ways. Metro Government provides up to 3 hours of administrative leave on the First Day of School for parents of school-age children, provided the workplace is not disrupted. Some businesses provide for the use of accrued sick or vacation leave, while other employers encourage managers to use flexible scheduling so that a parent can take their children to school in the morning.

What Are The Benefits of Being a Mayor's Honor Roll Employer?

Honor Roll businesses report that allowing employees to take their child to school on the First Day helps relieve parental anxiety, boosts employee morale and loyalty, and helps prevent potential school problems that can affect an employee's attendance and productivity. Being an Honor Roll employer is a way to demonstrate your company's support for education and families. All Honor Roll employers receive a Mayoral certificate suitable for framing.

How Does My Company Get Listed on the Mayor's Honor Roll?

Simply email or write to us describing what your company does to support employees who take their child to school on the First Day, and provide a human resources contact. To join the growing list of nearly 200 Nashville businesses on the Mayor's Honor Roll, email or write Danielle Mezera, Director of the Mayor's Office of Children and Youth at danielle.mezera@nashville.gov or at Metro Courthouse, 100 Public Square, Nashville, TN 37201. Ms. Mezera can be reached at 862.6000.
