Detectives from SID Security Threat Section and Sergeants from South and Midtown Precincts answered questions about the MNPD's resources available to the community to address possible security issues arising during the Ramadan holiday season. MNPD personnel present discussed the services and capabilities of the department (such as physical security assessments, trespass waivers, and extra patrol requests) available to community organizations and special events. MNPD personnel also discussed steps the community members could take at their own institutions to increase the safety of their congregations, especially during the Ramadan season. Suggestions included volunteer activity, hiring private security or off-duty police, and measures to address increased attendance during Ramadan services.
