A dog named Souffle didn't even make it off the Bridgestone Arena plaza without getting adopted on Monday afternoon.

That's exactly the kind of enthusiasm Metro Animal Care and Control is hoping for from the community as the holidays approach, and Predators defenseman Yannick Weber (<https://www.nhl.com/player/yannick-weber-8474134>), the Nashville Predators Foundation and the Metro Nashville Fire Department are helping to make it happen.

Following Monday's Preds practice, Weber assisted in presenting a check for $7,000 from the sale of Preds Fire t-shirts and jerseys last season on behalf of the Metro Fire Department and the Weber Woof Pack. In addition, MACC will be hosting $7 adoptions for the remainder of the week in honor of Weber' No. 7 jersey.

"It's great to see that the fire department wants to support a great cause," Weber, who has two huskies himself, said. "They could've chosen any kind of foundation, and they chose to go toward the animals... That money goes a long way for the Metro Shelter and we hope to keep it going."
